

EMS Short Story Contest

FIRST PRIZE $1,000

This short story contest is both a means of promoting EMS in literature and raising funds for our squad.

Short Story Contest

- The story must be related to EMS in some manner.
- The story must be written for a general audience.
- When we accept your story for publication, you are yielding only first-publication rights (after we've published it, you can include it on your own collection).

The Competition

One half of the entry fees for the writing contest will be reserved for prize money for winners. The submission fee is $35. The first place prize will be at least $1,000 and may be more depending on the number of entries. See website for full details.

The Publication

Halifax EMS will publish a small selection of the stories including the top three stories. This publication will be available for free to all those who paid the entrance fee. A printed edition will be available at on-line bookstores (BN.com, amazon.com) and our website.

The Judges

This writing competition will be judged by members of our squad, a couple of published authors including Chris Bohjalian.

For more information, visit our website:

www.HalifaxEMS.org

